

Professional Licensure Disclosure | Certified Public Accountant (CPA)

Overview

DeVry University and its Keller Graduate School of Management are committed to providing students with accurate information to help students make informed decisions about their education.

The educational prerequisites for Certified Public Accountant (CPA) licensure can differ significantly from state to state and U.S. territory. These variations may include the number of accounting and business course hours required, as well as specific course topics. These differences can affect a student's eligibility to sit for the Uniform CPA exam and apply for licensure in various jurisdictions. Institutions are obligated to disclose whether their programs fulfil the educational prerequisites for professional licensure or certification on a state-by-state basis.

Please consult the table below to see the decisions made by DeVry University and Keller Graduate School of Management regarding the degree programs listed. These determinations apply to individuals holding a bachelor's degree in accounting or a business degree with a focus on accounting or finance. DeVry's bachelor's degrees in accounting and business were used as a baseline for these determinations and checking with your state board of accountancy is recommended to ensure that all specific educational requirements for licensure are satisfied.

Other Accounting Related Programs

The programs listed below are not specifically designed to prepare students for licensure. However, they offer valuable knowledge and resources that can provide a foundation in accounting and business concepts as well as practical skills.

The undergraduate programs are classified as pre-licensure programs. For example, every state and territory require a minimum of 150 semester credits of specific coursework for CPA licensure eligibility. Generally, undergraduate programs do not provide enough credits to meet this requirement. Nevertheless, students can leverage the credits earned in these undergraduate programs toward the licensure requirements.

The Graduate Certificate in Accounting Certification Preparation program, with a Certified Public Accountant Exam Preparation option is designed to help students prepare to sit for the CPA exam by offering practical resources and focused exam preparation. Additionally, the program may offer a few extra credits in certain states to help students qualify for CPA licensure.

The remaining programs provide advanced knowledge and skills in accounting and finance to equip students for various non-licensure accounting and finance roles, such as financial analyst, management accountant, internal auditor, budget analyst, and financial manager.
